Country Club Homes

Beginning its life as a modest 2200 square foot ranch, this home was transformed because the owners saw the potential for this house to grow along with their own family.

By maintaining the original footprint of the house, Country Club Homes was able to effectively double its square footage with the extension of the garage and an addition off the back and second floor.

The addition of the second floor allowed the family to separate adult living spaces from the children's play area. A play room over the garage provides access through the main living area and also features a separate back staircase.

The second floor also provided additional space for the children's bedrooms, while the master retained its original location on the ground floor.
